

Residential Pathway

Reports to

Various

Staff responsibilities

As a graduate at Cushman & Wakefield you will have already proven your academic abilities through your University studies. We aim to build on this success and translate your education into the working practise and we provide the training, support and guidance to enable staff to obtain the necessary rounded experience and professional direction to pass their APC.

You will be placed in a diverse and dynamic team where you will work closely with clients and team members on the spectrum of Residential Surveying tasks and you will work closely with other graduates going through the same APC process.

Location

London, Manchester.

Key interfaces

Internal and external C&W Teams and Clients
- dependent on rotation.

Core function

To gain enough broad, in-depth practical experience to allow you to obtain your APC on your first sitting, whilst contributing to and experiencing the success of each team and ultimately Cushman & Wakefield.

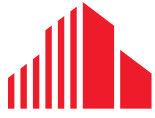

Operational responsibilities

Residential surveying graduates will have the opportunity to gain experience in a range of areas in our well-established Residential team including:

- Valuation
- Development Agency/Consultancy
- New Homes

Personal attributes

- 2.1 Undergraduate Degree classification
- GCSE grade 'C' in Maths & English
- Ambitious individuals motivated by success
- Display business focus with knowledge of the industry and news
- An ability to anticipate, analyse and solve problems
- Good communication, interpersonal and presentation skills

Residential Pathway

- An ability to work as part of a team and establish good working relationships
- A keen desire to listen, contribute, learn and develop with a view to passing the APC process
- No previous experience is required; however, a passion for residential surveying is essential
- Unconditional right to work in the UK.

Remuneration

Competitive

How to apply

Apply online at cushwakeearlycareers.com